Dinkelsbühl

If you really want to make a time trip like in the movies "back to future" then you should visit the town Dinkelsbuehl in Bavaria. The center is from and still in the Middle Ages but people and life are modern also. In this town you have the rare chance to see and, that is important, to feel how people lived in the year 1632, time of a thirty years long war in Europe.

The former Imperial Town of Dinkelsbühl, with its distinctive townscape, lies in the idyllic Wörnitz Valley. Dinkelsbühl's perfectly preserved town walls and magnificent patrician houses, which include the "Hezelhof" and the "Deutsches Haus", are a reminder of the era in the 15th and 16th century. Dinkelsbühl's industrious craftsmen and flourishing trading activities enhanced its wealth, with the town's fortifications and 16 towers providing protection from attack. St. George's Minster, one of the most beautiful hall churches in Germany, was built at the intersection of the old trade routes. Artists discovered the picturesque nooks, crannies and alleyways of the old town in the last century and now visitors from all over the world flock to the medieval town to get a taste of its vibrant ambiance.

Among the curious sights of Dinkelsbühl you will find the Old Town Hall with its prison cells and courtyard, the former hospital, the former Convent of the Carmelite, the Castle of the Teutonic Order (Deutschordensschloß) a Baroque building (1764) featuring an attractive Rococo Chapel. The most impressive patrician houses are found in the historic center of Dinkelsbühl at the market square: the site of the "Ratstrinkstube" (dating from about 1580, now the Gustav-Adolf Haus), the "Deutsches Haus" with its unique Renaissance half timbering (about 1600) and the "Schranner" (around 1609, an old grain market). On the market square you will find a memorial to Christoph-von-Schmid (1768-1854), theologian and author of children's books and the Christmas carol "Ihr Kinderlein, kommet" (1827). St Georges Minister (1448-1499) is one of the most beautiful examples of a late-Gothic hall church with its Romanesque tower portal (1220/1230) and valuable interior furnishings, one of its distinctive features being the "pretzel window" donated by the Bakers' Guild.
